

THE LIST

M

TOP ARCHITECTS

The 2022 ML List, compiled by the editors of Mountain Living, is different from past years. We have broken the list into two parts: you will find our list of Top Mountain Architects in the following pages. Interior Designers will have their own list appearing in the M/J 2022 issue. As the number of interior designers and architects working in the Rocky Mountain West has grown, so has the number of firms on the list. So we felt it was important to create two lists to give them the attention they deserve.

These architects in mountain territories have worked hard to become top in their professions, and we've taken note of their work, along with receiving recommendations from their clients, vendors, professional organizations and readers.

Keeping our readers in mind, we've organized the list to be user friendly. You'll find architects listed by state and town; some architects have more than one office location, and we have listed only their main corporate location. Those who were featured in Mountain Living during the past two years receive a special highlight that mentions their most recent projects in the magazine as of January/February 2022. Architects who have been featured during the past two years but are located in an area outside of Mountain Living's territory are grouped together at the end of the list.

This year's list is illustrated with a few of our favorite high-country spaces featured in the pages of Mountain Living over the past year. See more of each home at mountainliving.com.

Built on a ridge on Red Mountain, this Aspen home feels light and airy. Vast expanses of glass optimize the straight-on views of Ajax and Highlands ski mountains. Architect David Johnston says, "bringing the whole environment into the house was the key objective."

The homeowners of this Lake Tahoe getaway believe “the more, the merrier,” so they asked Architecture Allure to create a home that would comfortably accommodate visiting family and friends. The result is a roomy, classic Tahoe-style home with a modern twist: two steep-pitched gable forms as organizing features and a natural materials palette of cedar and stone.

The Copper Mountain home with agrarian roots and industrial touches was designed by PLAAD for a family of ski racers. The architects tackled the land's trapezium shape by creating a barn-shaped structure and breaking it in half. Wood and stone give the house warmth.

Designed as a “kind of glass house,” this Big Sky home offers incredible views of Lone Peak, Spanish Peaks and the Pioneer Mountains. Locati Architects oriented the rustic-yet-refined home to capture the multiple mountain views from as many rooms as possible. The resulting retreat offers endless vistas and ample room for visiting friends and family.

This Jackson home was created from a 19th-century barn, shipped from upstate New York's Mohawk River Valley. Goss says of the homeowner's request, "Fundamentally he was asking me to take a 200-year-old barn and create his family home around it." The exterior is 100-percent reclaimed hemlock and pine, and the home overlooks a pond that holds water year-round.
