

IN HARMONY

Creating thoughtful design informed by the regional landscape, the talented team at Farmer Payne Architects brings a fresh perspective to the Sun Valley vernacular and beyond.

When building or renovating a home, how important is it to hire the right professional?

Designing one's dream home is a synergistic process that can be compared to a long-term relationship. It's important for the client to choose their architect wisely so they can best enjoy this iterative and collaborative endeavor. When a client's expectations align with the architect's innate abilities, incredible projects are created.

How does creativity factor in problem solving, specifically in terms of architecture?

The Mountain West landscape can be unforgiving. Our designs are driven by a deep understanding of how to work within its constraints and finding innovative ways to celebrate all it has to offer. Being able to critically assess a site and turn limitations into possibilities is how we achieve the best project outcome. Problem-solving is a big part of our job, always trying to anticipate problems before they materialize.

How do you help clients deal with the realities of building in a mountain locale?

Knowing how to design in a mountain climate is paramount. We help our clients by crafting a robust team that can handle the challenges it brings. Assembling the right team with the necessary experience allows us to make monumental moves resulting in a seamless, timeless, elegant result.

FARMER PAYNE ARCHITECTS

Jamie Farmer, Principal, Scott Payne, Principal
208-214-5155 | farmerpaynearchitects.com
Ketchum, Idaho

